

Jeff Ratcliffe '01

After graduating from Millersville University, Ratcliffe attended graduate school at Temple University where he earned his PhD in cultural anthropology in 2012. While in grad school, Ratcliffe taught college classes as an adjunct professors.

Ratcliffe accepted a full-time position with Pro Football Focus after Cris Collinsworth bought the company. During the 2015 NFL season, he had a weekly column on ESPN.com. Ratcliffe is also a daily host of a morning show on SiriusXM's fantasy sports channel, putting to use the training he had as a DJ for WIXQ at Millersville during his time as an undergraduate.

Currently, Ratcliffe is working at the radio show and was hired to be the featured fantasy analyst this season on the CBS Sports Network NFL pregame show. In addition to the radio and television show, Ratcliffe writes five columns per week and produces weekly player projections. Over the past five years, he has been the third most-accurate ranker in the fantasy industry and was nominated for a writing award from the Fantasy Sports Writer's Association in 2013.