Welcome to the second edition of the Department of History newsletter. It is typical in these types of opening remarks for Chairs to reflect upon the activities and successes of the faculty and students from the past year. I think, as you review this newsletter, that proof of a productive year is evident. So, instead, I would like to take the space I have been provided to make a series of requests to the alumni of our Department.

We have, with greater frequency, been asked to justify why a Degree in History or Social Studies matters by future students, parents, and some College administrators. It is easy to promote the study of history to most but the rest want more data.

I am requesting, therefore, that you help in providing me with the evidence to support the claim that our degrees are central to a long and successful career in a variety of professions. If you are reading this newsletter and have not submitted an update on where you are, and what you are doing, today, please do so. Let us know the degree you received and the year that you earned it followed by a brief description of your activities after Millersville. I also encourage you to spread the word to your fellow Department graduates to let us know what has been going on. It is my goal to publicize all of our accomplishments and continue to support the notion that our degrees are the foundation of a modern Liberal Arts education and a stepping stone to success after Millersville University. I hope that you will aid in this venture.

Millersville University Symposium: The First Genocides of the Twentieth Century

On April 14, 2015 the History Department organized the Millersville University Symposium The First Genocides of the Twentieth Century. The Symposium was devoted to the commemoration of the centennial anniversary of the Armenian Genocide: 1915 – 2015.

Dr. Onek Adyanga presented his paper Herero Genocide: Race and Imperial Germany in South West Africa (Namibia); Dr. Victoria Khiterer presented her paper The Destruction of Galicia and Bukovina: The Genocidal Policy of the Russian Army on Occupied Territory during World War I; and Dr. Tanya Kevorkian presented her talk The Armenian Genocide: The 100th Anniversary.

The Symposium moderator was Dr. John McLarnon. After the paper presentations and questions the documentary film The Armenian Genocide by Andrew Goldberg (Director, Producer) was shown. The Symposium was attended by faculty, students and community members.

Dear Alumni,

The History Department sincerely congratulates you on your successes.

We are proud of you and your professional achievements.

Paths to Success

Ryan E. Barrick, BA History, May 2011

Work: I am currently a Social Studies teacher at the Maryland Academy of Technology and Health Sciences in Baltimore, MD. I teach college prep level African-American History and World History at my school. In addition, I am pursuing a Reading Specialist Master's Degree at Shippensburg University.

MU experience: Millersville University is widely known throughout Maryland for producing high quality academic educators. With my professional and academic achievements at Millersville, I was made an immediate offer of full-time employment at my school.

Advice to Students: Study hard and develop professional relationships with the History Department faculty. Also, join Phi Alpha Theta to gain experience presenting academic research in professional settings.

Wesley Brooks Toth, Master of Arts: History, Spring 2014

Ph.D. Student: As of this moment, I have been accepted into History Doctoral programs at Kent State University and University of Maine. It took me ten months to find out that I will be going back to school again to pursue my goal of becoming a history professor. No matter which school I choose, I will be a full-time Ph.D. student and quite possibly a Teaching Assistant.

MU experience: My education at Millersville University gave me a lot of confidence in my ability to search for what I want in life. With a Master's degree, I know that a lot of doors, which were previously closed to me, are now open. I do not feel as restricted in the job market as I used to when I had only a Bachelor's degree.

Advice to Students: I never expected to take another year off from school after I graduated with my Master's degree. I wanted to jump right into a Ph.D. program. Instead, I had to spend a year back home in Maryland working in the family business. During the winter, I put together applications to History programs in the hopes of continuing my path in academia. This commitment to going back to school has paid off now that two universities have accepted me. My advice to current MU students is to be patient. Sometimes taking a year or two off from school, or working in a job outside the degree, is great for refocusing life goals and learning about one's self.

Lindsey N. Alleman, B.A. History, December, 2011

Back to School: I am currently enrolled as a nursing student.

MU experience: I truly liked my education at Millersville University, but I never felt prepared for the job searching process.

Advice to Students: Always research the field that you want to work in and make sure that it is a good fit. for you. Also, search for job openings in your area to make sure that you will be able to secure a job. For me, securing a job in central PA is hard and that is why I had to go back to school for another degree.

Neil Hobbins, BA History, 2012

Work: I am the Executive Director at The Mill at Anselma National Historic Landmark. The Executive Director is responsible for day to day management of the organization. In addition, I provide leadership for all programs and initiatives of The Mill as directed by its Board of Trustees. The Executive Director reports to the Chair of The Mill's Board of Trustees and will work as a team with The Mill’s board, staff, and volunteers in the completion and implementation of the Mill Trust's strategic plan, fund raising, and programming objectives. The Executive Director also conducts research on the families and history of the Mill.

Advice to Students: Do not be afraid to volunteer. I received my initial position, the Education Coordinator at The Mill at Anselma National Historic Landmark, based upon my time volunteering in the past at different historic sites. It will help give you some experience in the field, and will also show you the best position for you in your job field. Once you are able to secure a job, become a sponge. Learn from everyone that you work with. Whether it is the Director, a fellow peer, or a volunteer who has been there since the start of the site, everyone has something that you can learn from.

David Williams, B.A. in History, 2012

Back to School: JD/MBA (application pending for MBA) at Western New England University

MU experience: I would not have given up my experience at Millersville for Harvard, Yale, or any other "top tier" school.

Advice to Students: Enjoy the small university atmosphere while at Millersville. It allows you to foster genuine relationships with professors, something that you would not have the ability to do at a large school.
