

Millersville University

TITLE PAGE

Josiah Strong:

Cultural Assimilation & The Immigrant Question

A Senior Thesis Submitted to the Department of History & The University Honors Program
In Partial Fulfillment of the Requirements for the University & Departmental Honors Baccalaureate

By

Richard W. Schultz

Millersville, Pennsylvania

May 1993

This Senior Thesis was completed in the Department of Psychology, defended before and approved by the following members of the Thesis committee:

(Signature of Professor)

Susan P. Luek, Ph.D (Thesis Advisor)

Professor of Psychology

(Signature of Professor)

Dorothee J. Blum, Ph.D.

Assistant Professor of Mathematics

(Signature of Professor)

Richard D. Clark, Ph.D.

Associate Professor of Earth Science

The author examines three plays by the twentieth-century dramatist, Arthur Miller. Miller's use of the American Dream is analyzed in The American Clock, Death of a Salesman, and A Memory of Two Mondays. These plays are connected by the Great Depression. Concludes that Miller shows true success is found not through the attainment of money, but through the intrinsic reward found in work.*

* This abstract has been chosen because its brevity allowed it to fit on this page. Most abstracts are more detailed.

ABSTRACT PAGE