TITLE IX protects your right to play. Did you know that it also protects your right to learn?

Since 1972, TITLE IX has required all educational institutions that receive federal funds or financial assistance to prohibit sex discrimination in their education programs and activities.

Programs and activities at colleges and universities that receive federal funds must operate in a nondiscriminatory manner. Examples of these programs and activities are academic programs, admissions, athletics, counseling, discipline, employment, financial aid (i.e., scholarships), housing, recreation, and others.

TITLE IX REMAINS AS RELEVANT TODAY AS IT DID FOUR DECADES AGO.
