

M.ED. IN LEADERSHIP FOR TEACHING AND LEARNING

Leadership in schools today is a critical and often difficult position that requires preparation to equip the leader with the skills and information necessary for a rewarding career. The Master of Education degree in Leadership for Teaching and Learning through Millersville University is designed to prepare teachers for leadership roles such as principal, department head, curriculum director, and supervisor. The program philosophy is grounded in ethical leadership and strives to produce genuine leaders who can transform schools into learning communities that meet the needs of all stakeholders.

Millersville University believes that quality school leaders have the power to transform lives. MU works to prepare those educational leaders through the Leadership for Teaching and Learning graduate program. This program is grounded in ethical leadership and strives to produce genuine leaders who can transform schools into learning communities that meet the needs of all stakeholders.

MU taps into the strength of cohort groups whereby candidates advance through the program with a group of educators that rapidly become a source of personal support and a professional resource. This course of study provides a Master of Education (M.Ed.) degree in Leadership for Teaching and Learning, a K-12 principal certificate and a K-12 supervisor of curriculum and instruction certificate. Students holding a master's degree may pursue the principal certificate and supervisory certificate separately.

Admission to this program is open to applicants who possess a baccalaureate degree from a regionally accredited four-year college or university and a Pennsylvania Instructional I Certification. The Leadership for Teaching and Learning program has been accredited by the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education and the Educational Leadership Constituent Council.

What Will I Learn?

The graduate-level Leadership for Teaching and Learning program incorporates professional studies core courses, which explore educational psychology, research methods and education philosophies, and educational leadership core courses, which explore leadership theories, school law and supervision functions. Classroom knowledge becomes practical through applied supervision and applied practicum requirements.
