Academic Units

In some cases, especially regarding elections to representative bodies, reference is made to Academic Units. These include Education, Humanities, Social Sciences, and Science and Mathematics. A list of the academic departments comprising each academic unit is provided below.

Academic Departments

A department is a body of faculty commonly involved in the scholarly activities of one or more related academic disciplines and recognized as such in accordance with the current organizational plan. The selection and duties of department chairpersons are covered in the CBA, which also covers the appointment of faculty members to departments.

1. Membership

A voting member of a department is a member of the faculty who holds membership in the department having been assigned to the department by the Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs insofar as such assignment does not conflict with the CBA.

2. Functions

A department may make decisions or recommendations on all matters affecting it. It is assumed, for example, that no matter directly concerned with a department will be determined by the administration until the department has been given a reasonable opportunity to make a recommendation.

3. Meetings

- a. Regular meetings of a department shall be held as determined by the department and the department chairperson.
- b. Special meetings may be called by one-half of a department's members, the chairperson, the Dean of the school, or by the Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs.

- c. A quorum consists of a majority of the regular full-time members of the department.
