MU NIGHT AT THE BARNSTORMERS

Baseball is back in Lancaster and Millersville has caught baseball fever! On Saturday, August 6, join us for MU night at the Lancaster Barnstormers.

The first 2,000 adults who enter Clipper Magazine Stadium for the game will receive a free T-shirt. MU and Student Services, Inc., are the proud sponsors.

Before the game, Millersville's Alumni Services office is hosting a buffet/hospitality event for alumni and their guests. The alumni event is an all-you-can-eat buffet that includes a ticket to the baseball game—$25 covers the food and game tickets for adults; $21.50 for kids 6-12; $10 for ages 2-5; and under 2, free. Doors open at 5:30 p.m. for the alumni buffet and the game starts at 7:05 p.m.

For information about the Lancaster Barnstormers game schedule and more, visit www.lancasterbarnstormers.com. The season goes through the end of September.

Be sure to check out the stadium's foul pole signs wrapped in black and gold, and sporting the name Millersville University.

For yet another Millersville connection, stop in at the Brickyard Restaurant and Pub located on North Prince Street, a few blocks south of the stadium. Look for the vintage photos of Marauder athletics displayed throughout the restaurant. Karen Lapinsky '96, her husband Eric and Christian Kelker are owners of the restaurant that opened in April.

To make reservations for the event, contact the Alumni Services office by calling 717- 872-3352 or 800-681-1855, or email mualumni@millersville.edu

May commencement adds 1,111 Millersville graduates

Two commencement ceremonies were held on Saturday, May 7 for 1,111 graduates and their families and friends.

With Biemesderfer Stadium under renovation, graduation had to move indoors to Pucillo Gymnasium, necessitating two events to accommodate the students and their guests.

Al Hunt and Judy Woodruff, masters of ceremonies for MU's 150th anniversary celebration, received honorary doctoral degrees at MU's graduation. Hunt was the commencement speaker.

All master's degree candidates and bachelor candidates in the School of Humanities and Social Sciences graduated in a 10 a.m. ceremony. Bachelor's candidates in the School of Education and School of Science and Mathematics graduated at 2 p.m.

Al Hunt, the Washington managing editor for Bloomberg News and moderator of CNN's "The Capital Gang," was the keynote speaker for both ceremonies. His speech was titled, "The Challenges—and Conundrums—Ahead."

Hunt has served with his wife Judy Woodruff, former CNN news anchor, as the masters of ceremonies for MU's 150th anniversary celebration. Both Hunt and Woodruff received MU honorary degrees in recognition of their outstanding accomplishments within the media world.

In addition, Sue A. Walker '64 and her husband Robert S. Walker '64, co-chairs of Millersville University's 150th anniversary committee both received the University's 150th Anniversary Medallion for their leadership and commitment to the university.

Mrs. Walker has served as the chair of Millersville's Council of Trustees and received the Distinguished Service Award during April's Honors and Awards ceremony (see page 19). Congressman Robert S. Walker retired from the U.S. House of Representatives after serving Pennsylvania's 16th District for 20 years. Both of the Walkers received their bachelor's degrees in education from MU in 1964.

Argires Science Complex dedicated

Millersville's state-of-the art science complex proudly bears the name of two friends of the university: Dr. James and Tasia Argires (pictured below).

Millersville University named its science complex in honor of Dr. James and Tasia Argires, at a dedication ceremony on April 27, 2005.

A well-known Lancaster neurosurgeon, Argires is associated with Lancaster Neuroscience & Spine Associates. His wife Tasia is a leader in several community initiatives.

The James P. and Tasia K. Argires Science Complex is made up of four buildings—Roddy Hall, Caputo Hall, Brossman Hall and Nichols House—and brings together most of the university's science programs: biology, chemistry, computer science, earth sciences (geology, meteorology, and oceanography), nursing and physics.

The Argires's gift is the largest single private gift in the recently completed focused campaign. It supported the renovation of Roddy Hall, which was completely gutted and outfitted with high-tech classrooms and laboratories designed for student and faculty research.

The following is excerpted from a speech given by Denise Harbaugh at the dedication ceremony of the Argires Science Complex.

As a graduating senior in high school, I had to make the biggest decision I had been faced with at that point in my life: where to find a college which would give me not only the education but the motivation and means to obtain my career goal, acceptance at one of the top medical schools in the nation in four years or less. As valedictorian of Red Lion High School, I had many options including Ivy League, private colleges, and state universities. I chose Millersville University and ...I made the best decision of my life.

My choice was made the day I toured this beautiful science complex we are dedicating today. The facility was top-notch and filled with the necessary equipment to perform independent research. I had visited other schools, toured other facilities, and here at Millersville found not only the essential tools but a feeling of intimacy with my surroundings.

... At Millersville, I was treated as an individual, instructed personally by some of the finest professors in the nation, and was given every opportunity to succeed.

Millersville University, its staff, faculty, and facilities, prepared me to apply to... any medical school I chose...I have chosen to matriculate at The Penn State University College of Medicine.

I sincerely appreciate and give thanks, on behalf of myself and all of the students in the School of Science and Mathematics, to everyone here at Millersville University and, in closing, give special thanks to Dr. and Mrs. Argires for their generosity.

Future doctor Denise Harbaugh '05 is headed to medical school at The Penn State University College of Medicine.

FOUR CORNERS

An international gathering of culture and the arts

Music. Dance. Entertainment. Food. Crafts. Art.

It was all part of Millersville University's "Four Corners Gathering," held over three days, May 19-21. All events were open to the community.

The idea for the international gathering of culture and the arts was spearheaded by Jeri Robinson, chair of MU's Department of Art.

"As a public institution, Millersville University has a commitment to the community," said Robinson. "This festival offered a unique opportunity to reach out while also fulfilling our educational mission."

A diverse group of artists with multicultural vision provided the community an opportunity to participate in hands-on activities that represented a host of international cultures.

Elementary and secondary school students visited the festival and learned about the history of various cultures through activities and events.

The Pennsylvania Academy of Music Children's Choir performed in the outdoor Benecon Amphitheatre, at McComsey Hall.

Another highlight of the festival was the Tibetan monks from the Drepung Loseling Monastery. The monks created a Mandala Sand Painting (see cover photo) and performed the "Sacred Music Sacred Dance."

On Friday evening, May 20, mystical masked dancers and singers performed their "Sacred Music Sacred Dance for World Healing." This extraordinary performance featured elaborate costumes, traditional instruments and unique multiphonic singing.

As part of the Mandala Sand Painting, millions of grains of sand were painstakingly laid in place and painted. This ancient spiritual art form is used to purify and heal the environment and its inhabitants.

The closing ceremony for the festival centered on the mandala. The monks swept the sand from the mandala into a container. It was then returned to the earth by being poured into moving water.

Fashion. The one thing you can be certain of is that it will change. And then change back. What goes up, comes down.

Hemlines and hair styles, short and long. From bobbed hair to bouffant styles to literally ironing one's hair, it's all about style.

From beanies to baseball caps, bustles to bow ties, tie-dyed to button-down, saddle shoes to sandals, flapper dresses to poodle skirts, zoot suits to leisure suits. The fashion fads of each era could be found among Millersville students—and still can.

Even the craze for body piercing and tattooing has made its mark on the 'Ville. Today, jeans and denim are the mainstay of most college students. Sweat pants and hoodies (sweatshirts with hoods) are standard attire to class and for "chilling." Although comfort rules, formal dances and events still provide the occasion for classic dress up.

Story by
Jennifer B. Ericson

Millersville University is deepening its commitment to international education and expanding its opportunities for students to study abroad.

As part of this commitment, the Office of International Affairs has been actively seeking partnerships with international schools, to provide Millersville students with even more choices.

To date, MU has partnerships with twelve universities in six countries: Chile, France, Japan, Germany, Spain, and the United Kingdom. MU is hoping soon to add schools in Northern Ireland, Puerto Rico, South Africa and Jordan to its list of international partners.

In April, as part of the 150th anniversary celebration, MU invited delegates from each of its international partner schools to participate in a roundtable discussion about the importance of international education. Delegates from seven schools attended the unprecedented event, during which MU President Francine McNairy signed new partnership agreements with two schools in France: the American Business School in Paris and Université de Caen Basse-Normandie in Caen.

Although these delegates came from different cultures and countries, during the discussion they expressed a common belief—that international education is the first step toward world peace.

"International education is a good tool to overcome hostility and fear," said Thomas Komm, director of the international office at Philipps-Universität in Germany.

London Metropolitan University Professor Christopher Rolfe agreed. "It's stereotypes and our ignorance that cause clashes with other people," Rolfe said. Learning about other countries and cultures breaks those stereotypes and leads to understanding.

"Such mutual understanding," added Komm, "will help us work together to solve problems posed by globalization, such as environmental degradation and terrorism."

Throughout the roundtable discussion, the delegates encouraged MU students to expand their horizons by pursuing an international education and learning a foreign language. Rolfe added that students who can speak a foreign language are more competitive in the job market.

Patrick Dubois, director of international cooperation at Université de Caen Basse-Normandie, presented international education not simply as an elective but rather as an imperative. He contended that being "international" is synonymous with being educated.

International Education at MU

MU provides students pursuing any major with an impressive array of options for adding international education to their college experience. All students can take classes in international studies, attend special seminar courses taught by visiting foreign professors, learn a foreign language or study abroad.

Not only can students take classes in international studies, but also they can make international studies their major or minor. Currently, 45 students are majoring in international studies, while 25 have made it their minor.

From London to Paris and back

In addition to touring London, the two went on an excursion to France. They are shown here in front of Notre Dame Cathedral in Paris.

Both Millersville students are majoring in communications with a concentration in public relations.

Dr. Kirsten Bookmiller, director of MU's Office of International Affairs, provides inspiration and support to students participating in the program.

MU's international studies program is an inter-disciplinary one. The program draws on classes from sixteen other departments, such as social sciences, humanities, math, sciences, and education. Students pursuing international studies as a major or minor must also select a geographic region of specialization and become proficient in a foreign language.

Interest in international studies classes has been increasing since September 11, 2001. More students are registering for Middle Eastern Studies classes and Introduction to Global Politics than ever before. For the first time, "We actually had to turn students away," said Dr. Robert Bookmiller, assistant professor for government and political affairs.

Students now seem to realize that "we have to learn about other countries; we're not isolated," Bookmiller said. This awareness excites Bookmiller, who hopes to teach students about the level to which Americans are interconnected with the rest of the world.

International Faculty Seminars

To learn more about the connection to the Muslim world, MU offered several lectures on Muslim culture and the Arab world. One noted expert was Dr. Gali Oda Tealakh, head of the department for cultural and international affairs at Princess Sumaya University in Jordan. Tealakh spent the month of February in residence at MU as part of an international Fulbright Scholar exchange program. (See sidebar on page 11 for more on Tealakh's visit.)

Tealakh's visit is just one example of the ways in which the Office of International Affairs is working with the academic departments across campus to provide MU students with greater opportunities to gain an international education, said Dr. Kirsten Bookmiller, director of MU's Office of International Affairs. In its agreements with partnering international schools, MU also negotiates for faculty exchanges.

Millersville students and faculty members attended an international symposium dealing with the European Union held at the Foro Europeo School of Business in Spain this May.

Such faculty exchanges allow for professors from international schools to visit MU and give one-, two- or four-week seminar classes during fall, winter and summer breaks, said Bookmiller. MU faculty can also visit partner schools to teach special seminar classes.

This past fall, Dr. Joe Galante, director of Millersville's MBA program, went to the Foro Europeo School of Business in Spain to teach a course on corporate ethics and fraud. During spring break, three faculty members from that same school then came to MU and taught sections of a course called International Business and the Environment. "This was the first time faculty from Spain came to MU's MBA program," said Galante. These exchanges were so successful, it will now be an annual event.

Because such courses can be offered during semester breaks, more students can take them. Some majors at MU have such extensive course requirements that students can have a hard time fitting elective courses into their academic schedule. But, students in all majors can fit an elective course into a semester break, explained Bookmiller.

Study Abroad

Another semester break course option that is gaining popularity is faculty-led trips abroad. "We've had an unprecedented expansion of faculty-led programs," she said.

During spring break, Dr. Christine Gaudry-Hudson, chair of the foreign languages department, led seven MU students on a trip to Normandy, France. Only half of the students were French majors. As part of the course, the students read Memoirs from Normandy by Armond Irac. While in Normandy, the students met and interviewed the author. "It was a neat way to study," said Gaudry-Hudson.

Faculty members from outside the foreign languages department are also offering such destination classes. Last summer, Tony Elliot,

Dr. Gali Oda Tealakh

MU students have become increasingly interested in Middle East studies, and in February, they had an opportunity to learn more. Dr. Gali Oda Tealakh, head of the department for cultural and international affairs at Princess Sumaya University in Jordan, came to MU as a visiting professor for the month of February. During his visit, Tealakh offered several presentations on the Arab world and lectured in government classes.

Tealakh, a Fulbright scholar, came to MU as part of the Council for International Exchange of Scholars' Fulbright Specialist Program, Direct Access to the Muslim World. He believes that "to fight terrorism, we have to build bridges between Arabs and Americans – people to people. We have to know each other better and in an even deeper fashion."

Building those bridges, he said, begins with education. Tealakh observed that most American universities teach classes on the Middle East, but no universities in the Middle East teach classes on American history. He said that because Middle East students don't have enough information about America they can't make informed decisions about political ideology. For example, the lack of information about America, he said, allowed so many to believe Osama bin Laden's philosophies.

"The origins of terrorism usually are in bad government," said Tealakh. He defined bad governments as those characterized by "dictatorship, suppression, poverty, and injustice." Under such regimes, he explained, people become disaffected and more easily drawn to terrorism.

"To fight terrorism, we have to build bridges between Arabs and Americans—people to people."

For this reason, Tealakh said, "President Bush's call for democratizing the Middle East is welcome." People under a democratic regime, he said, would have better representation in parliament, a better education system, and better healthcare. These improvements will lessen the draw of terrorism.

Tealakh's visit helped to dispel some myths about Islam and Arab culture. The audience who attended his presentations was fascinated to learn that, "Islam is a tolerant religion and has nothing to do with terrorism," he said. Also, he said, audiences were surprised to learn that Middle East people are just like them.

On the role of women, he said, under the Islam religion men and women are equal. In fact, he said, the prophet Muhammad actually worked for his wife. Currently there are eight women serving in Jordan's parliament. He believes that women and men should have equal representation. "Representation of two sexes," he said, "will give presentation that society is flying with two wings."

Princess Sumaya University already has an exchange program with schools in Illinois and Florida, and Millersville is its latest partner. Up to ten MU students would spend the summer in Jordan and two students from Jordan would then spend a year at MU.

Tealakh's visit to MU was a successful step in using education to begin building, what he calls, "a bridge of understanding" between Americans and the Arab world.

In April, Millersville hosted an international symposium and related roundtable discussions as part of its 150th anniversary.

MU's director of drama, led 14 students on a trip to London. During the weeklong class that was worth three credits, the students saw four live performances and toured several theaters, including the Royal Theater and the Globe. Elliot called the course the London Theater Tour, and it had broad appeal. "Only a few students were tied to the theater program," he said. This course will be offered again next summer.

"Such classes abroad," said Elliot, "give students exposure to international culture they might not otherwise experience, particularly if their major is one that cannot easily accommodate a semester or year abroad."

Another form of international education available at MU is foreign language study. Although foreign language is not a requirement for graduation, MU regularly offers classes in French, German, and Spanish. Some semesters, said Gaudry-Hudson, it also offers Latin, Italian, and Japanese. And in response to increased student interest in the Middle East, she said, "We are strongly considering [offering] Arabic."

One way to greatly improve fluency in a foreign language is to study abroad, but that's not a requirement even of foreign language majors. And students don't have to speak a foreign language to participate in a study abroad program.

Millersville has a strong tradition in this area. In September 1963, the first group of students from Millersville and other Pennsylvania colleges headed to Marberg, Germany. At that time, Pennsylvania had mandated that all teacher candidates in foreign languages had to study at least one year at an institution in the country of the candidate's target language. The program is still going strong. In 2003, alumni of the Marburg program celebrated its 40th anniversary during MU's Homecoming.

With sufficient planning, students in any major can incorporate study abroad into their college career, said Bookmiller. The Office of International Affairs is trying to "creatively re-imagine" study abroad pro-

"Studying in Chile has been, by far, the most amazing, frustrating, exciting, challenging, and rewarding experience of my life. Everything about the program and country has been incredible. I can't wait to go back!"

-Lauren Fox

grams; "We're trying to cast as wide a net as possible," she said.

"We don't want students who don't have a [foreign] language to think they are limited to going abroad only to English-speaking countries," said Bookmiller. For example, she said, "At the Université de Caen, students have the chance to start learning French."

Last summer, Anne Wonsettler, a junior, spent a month in Spain taking two Spanish language classes. In addition to improving her Spanish, she said, the experience "has completely changed the way I feel about my life. I feel that I have endless options."

Being totally immersed in the language as well as the culture made senior Natalie Funk's semester in Chile so successful. Like Wonsettler, Funk said, the experience gave her a different outlook on life. She knew she'd made the right decision to go abroad when, about a month into the semester, she was attending a lecture presented in Spanish and realized with great joy that she understood every word.

Michael Aceo-Malaney, a junior, spent the spring semester in Spain. "This experience has made me a lot more independent," he said. "Experiencing different cultures helps you grow as a person and opens your eyes to the diversity of the world."

To make sure MU students enjoy academic success while overseas, the Office of International Affairs spends a lot of time preparing students before they go. Several academic advisers review the course options available at the foreign school to make sure students are selecting courses that will transfer to MU and will count toward the student's graduation requirements.

When selecting international schools with which to establish partnerships, MU makes sure the school offers courses in which MU students are interested and has a strong international student office to provide adequate support to our students. And, while students are abroad, said Bookmiller, MU's Office of International Affairs stays in close contact with them to make sure they are doing well.

While studying in Spain, Wonsettler greatly appreciated the support she received from Drs. Kirsten and Robert Bookmiller. "They are an incredible support system," she said.

"One of the great myths is that doing study abroad will put you behind," said Dr. Kirsten Bookmiller. However, with the right planning, students can make full academic progress. In fact, 99 percent of MU's students who go abroad do make full or nearly full academic progress.

Currently, about 95 MU students study abroad for a semester or year. And, said Bookmiller, that number has doubled over the past five years. Another one hundred students participate each year in faculty-led study tours or summer study programs abroad.

To her surprise, even after September 11, 2001, the numbers of students going abroad has continued to increase. She thinks the terrorist attacks of that fall have made students "more committed to being an international citizen."

Foreign Students at Millersville

Millersville students who don't venture off to distant lands can learn about different cultures right in the 'Ville. At any given time, there are approximately 60 foreign students attending MU.

Foreign students come from all over the world: Nigeria, Kenya, Russia, Ecuador, Bulgaria, Greece, Ireland, South Africa, Japan, China, India and others.

Although some students experience homesickness and culture shock, most make the transition very well. Rita Miller, international student adviser, helps foreign exchange students adjust to life at MU. Most of the students come equipped with "an adventurous mind-set to travel and live abroad."

In fact, she added, some students like it so much, they don't want to return to their home country. But there is the fact of visas and legal status—an often complex situation that comes under Miller's duties.

"These students are really open to new experiences and to sharing their culture," she said. "It's refreshing."

In addition to the education foreign students gain, Miller believes that their presence and participation on campus "enriches our student experience." She said, "The cultural understanding and educational experience this offers to all Millersville students is tremendous."

"Studying abroad was the smartest thing that I have ever done, I had the time of my life... In Kiruna, the ice hotel... I slept in an igloo, went dogsledding, etc. Also, my first trip to Stockholm I went ice climbing... While I was studying abroad I had the opportunity to visit 13 countries including: Sweden, Denmark, England, Germany, Slovakia, Hungary, Romania, Turkey, Greece, Russia, Finland, Poland, and Estonia."

A MAGICAL PERFORMANCE FOR MU MUSICIANS

When more than 30 members of the Millersville University Choir joined with the renowned Bach Choir of Bethlehem to sing Johann Sebastian Bach's Mass in B Minor in March, it was a momentous occasion.

"Look at these kids. Look at what this public university is doing. Look at our music program," said Dr. Micheal Houlahan, professor of music and chair of Millersville's Department of Music.

According to Houlahan, the performance demonstrated the outstanding talents of Millersville's music students and helped to raise money for the newly established J.S. Bach Scholarship Fund for Music Students.

"This is how we can attract the finest and brightest music students to enter the education field. This is how we can support our music department and show the caliber of our students," said Houlahan.

Right, The Mass in B Minor is so demanding that only a very select group of singers is capable of singing it. MU student Carrie Garl (in the forefront) said singing the Mass was "insanely difficult" and "awesome."

The concert marked the 150th anniversary of Millersville University with one of the most challenging and difficult masses ever written. Even Bach himself never heard his own Mass in B Minor in its entirety, because he never intended it to be performed in one presentation.

The Mass in B Minor runs more than two hours long and is one of the most complicated musical pieces ever to be sung by a choir.

According to Millersville University Choir director Dr. Buddy James, the Mass in B Minor is the only musical setting of the Latin Ordinary that Bach wrote. It is not clear whether Bach wrote the Mass in B Minor for a Lutheran service or for the city of Dresden, which was primarily a Catholic city.

"Bach never arranged for a complete performance of the Mass in B Minor and did not even put a title on the collection of the five movements," added James.

He explained that the Mass is so demanding that only a very select group of singers is capable of singing it. The singers must be able to read music thoroughly and be musically literate. The Mass is so long and intricate that it is considered to be virtually impossible to memorize.

That was part of the appeal of giving the Millersville University Choir the "ultimate challenge." Director James had confidence that the students could rise to the musical heights required of them.

Arrangements were made with Greg Funfgeld, artistic director of the Bach Choir of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, who reviewed the choir's credentials and listened to recordings of their singing. Funfgeld was so impressed that he agreed to have the Bach Choir perform with the Millersville University Choir. This marked a rare collaboration and the first time the world-renowned Bach Choir of Bethlehem shared the stage with a university choir.

On March 12, 2005, the Millersville University Choir, the Bach Choir, the Bach Festival Orchestra and six professional soloists joined together to make musical history.

"We were honored to be a part of Millersville University's anniversary festivities" reported Funfgeld. "I believe there are many rewarding facets to this collaboration. Millersville's remarkably talented young singers were joined by the 100 voices of the Bach Choir in a synergistic and symbiotic relationship that enriched both groups in profound and memorable ways."

Funfgeld detailed some of the history of the Mass in B Minor, explaining that in 1523 when Luther produced a document describing the liturgy of the newly founded Lutheran church, he modeled it extensively on the Catholic liturgy with which he and his followers were familiar. Luther's interest in developing the new liturgical practice was to provide adaptability for composers and clergymen so they could use the Latin or the German, with more complicated arrangements for the choir and simpler versions for the congregation to sing.

In his Mass in B Minor, Bach set the traditional five texts of the Ordinary to music, which included the Kyrie, the Gloria, the Credo, the Sanctus and the Agnus Dei.

"There is no evidence that Bach ever arranged for a complete performance of all movements. Instead, movements were performed individually or in smaller groups at different times and places," said Funfgeld.

The Bach Choir of Bethlehem is the oldest Bach Choir in the country. It attracts thousands of national and international visitors to its annual festival in Bethlehem each May. Under Funfgeld's passionate direction, 95 volunteer members sing as part of a finely honed vocal ensemble with a professional orchestra and world-renowned soloists. In addition to the Mass in B Minor, the Bach Choir's repertoire includes 133 cantatas, all of the motets, and many of Bach's larger works.

The Bach Choir has received critical acclaim for performances at the the Herkulessaal at Munich's Royal Residence, the Kennedy Center in Washington and Carnegie Hall in New York. It was also been the subject of an Emmy-winning PBS documentary, Make a Joyful Noise.

The concert provided a unique opportunity to combine the gifted and experienced singers of the Bach Choir who have performed the Mass dozens of times with the equally gifted and dynamic Millersville University singers who performed it for the first time. Student rehearsals began in September of 2004 and continued twice a week for more than seven months. Each Millersville singer was paired with a mentor from the Bach Choir so that the musical and personal connection could be reinforced.

Millersville University Choir member Carrie Garl, a sophomore majoring in music business and technology, found that singing the Mass in B Minor was "insanely difficult and exhausting." With the complexity of the Mass, its extreme range of high and low notes, its overwhelming vocal demands and its sheer length, it was a monumental task.

"We pretty much lived, slept and breathed the music," said Garl, adding that as the time for the concert grew closer, the excitement began to build. It was "awesome—an experience of a lifetime."

Another Millersville University Choir member Lauren Krider, a senior music education major who studies jazz voice, has been a member of the university choir for three years. She, too, found that the experience was incredibly rewarding and "bittersweet."

"A first it seemed so challenging, so difficult, we had to just take it a little at a time or it was too overwhelming," she said. "Our musicianship grew so much and we realized that we were capable of this incredible accomplishment."

Indeed, as the Millersville University Choir demonstrated their determination and commitment to the music of Bach, they provided a lasting legacy for themselves and the music students who would follow in their footsteps. Their performance of Bach's Mass in B Minor was proof that the quality of the music education at Millersville University is unparalleled. So much so that MU's choir was invited to an encore performance with the Bach Choir—this time in Bethlehem in May.

In July the Millersville University Choir will represent the United States at an international festival in Mexico, the Festival Mundial de Coros. Only one choir per country is invited to the festival.

After the rigor of training to perform Bach's masterpiece, the talented students making up Millersville University Choir know they have the dedication and talent to reach any goal they set.

Following the concert, members of the Millersville University Choir—Michelle Stoltzfus, Ashley Walker and Doug Malora—were thrilled and excited.

Alumni WEEKEND

MILLERSVILLE UNIVERSITY

Thanks for coming home to the 2005
Alumni Days!

April 12-17

Alumni Association Awards

During the annual Honors & Awards Convocation on April 16, the 2005 MU Alumni Association's Distinguished Service Award was presented to Sue A. Walker '64 and Darlene I. Ford received the 2005 Honorary Alumnus Award.

Sue (Albertson) Walker '64, after completing her bachelor's degree in education at Millersville, earned a master's in library science from Syracuse University and completed graduate studies at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and Drexel University. In 1999, after 26 years, she retired from the School District of Lancaster.

Since 1997, she has played an active role on Millersville's Council of Trustees and has served as chairperson since 2000. She resides in East Petersburg with her husband, former congressman, Robert S. Walker '64. The Walkers served as co-chairs of MU's 150th Anniversary Committee.

Darlene I. Ford received the 2005 Honorary Alumnus Award. Ford, widow of the late MU geography professor, Dr. Robert N. Ford, has been a dedicated friend, a strong advocate of higher education and a philanthropic supporter of the MU Foundation and Millersville University.

Ford taught business at Columbia High School and Spanish and business education at Penn Manor High School, before retiring in 1981. A resident of Millersville, Ford has been a member of the Millersville Campus Club for more than 40 years.

She has provided financial support to the University and the Foundation, creating an endowment, which funds two scholarships to undergraduates. Most recently, Ford has generously supported the renovations of McComsey Hall and Millersville named the Ford Atrium in honor of the Fords.

ALUMNI INTEREST

Alumni board elected

On April 23, the MU Alumni Association Board of Directors announced the results of elections for officers and vacant members-at-large positions. All 16 elected positions became effective on July 1, 2005. The newly elected officers (2005-2007) include:

President: Dr. Kathleen M. Brabson '70. Brabson (pictured at left), recently retired from Penn Manor School District as a teacher and administrator, resides in Lancaster with her husband Chip. She has served the association as president elect for the past two years in addition to a number of years on various alumni committees and is a past recipient of the Association's Outstanding Service Award. Brabson assumes the presidency from Philip R. Loht '65.

President Elect: Dr. Richard L. Frerichs '64. Frerichs is retired from MU after 36 years, most recently as the chairperson of the department of educational foundations. He resides in Millersville with his wife Marsha.

Treasurer: Mary Ann Gerber '67. Gerber is retired from the Solanco School District. She is a practicing lawyer and resides in Millersville with her husband J. Phillip Gerber '67.

Secretary: Marni K. Honigman '92. Honigman, of Philadelphia, is employed with JEUS as a business development specialist.

Twelve alumni were elected to the board from a list of 22 nominees. Alumni elected (and their respective terms) include:

2005-2007: Albert Corr '93, Philadelphia; Brandon Danz '03, Washington Boro; Michael K. Henry '83, Willow Street; William Martin '81, Lititz and Joyce W. Nolt '62, Lancaster.

2005-2006: Dr. Dominick DiNunzio '53, Levittown; Richard Dutcher '50, Willow Street; Dr. Stacey M. Fink '72, Lititz; Joyce Herr '80, Millersville; Dave Malley '02, Philadelphia; Jennifer Strobel '95, Lancaster and Cheryl Youtz '69, Millersville.

Other board members whose terms expire in 2006: Megan Baumgartner '01, Saratoga Springs, N.Y.; Arthur Drescher '64, Glenside and Nelson Parrish Jr. '81, Glenside.

Online community leaps forward

Join the thousands of alumni that have clicked their way onto the new alumni website, found at www.millersville.edu/~alumni

Launched in February, the improved website offers a host of features that alumni are using daily. Alumni may log into the site with their secure password to read and update their profiles, add class notes with photos, send an email to a friend, register for alumni events and find out more on alumni association benefits and services.

To get started click on the first-time users button at the top of the screen and follow the prompts to enter your last name and code number—a protected identification “M” number which was sent to all alumni in the early spring on a postcard with a scratch-off. If you can’t locate the postcard, you can get your M number by calling the Alumni Services office at 800-681-1855.

Go on, surf, verify or correct your record/profile and begin the fun. The information that MU has in its current database was pre-populated in your profile when you log in. Please check your information, correct what is inaccurate and choose the “hide” option for the items you would prefer to keep confidential. Please note: Although you may have completed a directory survey during the past year, the information may not be reflected in the online version yet due to the 28,000 surveys returned! Please make the updates online, too.

This service is for MU alumni exclusively and is not to be used for commercial purposes. If you have any questions, please contact the Alumni Services office at 800-681-1855 or send us an email at mualumni@millersville.edu

Goodbye Landes Hall

On Saturday, May 14, former residents of Landes Hall came together for a reunion and a chance to say goodbye to their old residence hall. More than 3,000 former residents of Landes were invited.

Those who attended the reunion shared memories, photos, laughs and a sample of the antics from when they were residents.

Part of Landes will be torn down over the summer. The west wing of Landes will be renovated, primarily for faculty offices, as part of the new home for MU's School of Education. The facility will be expanded to a 60,000-square-foot and is proposed to be a “green” building that is environmentally positive. The building is scheduled to be completed in time for the spring 2007 semester.

Landes Hall opened as a female-only residence hall in September 1964 and later became coed.

150 Years...

A Timeline of Our History

1981 Dr. Joseph Caputo becomes president of Millersville on January 12.

1984 President Reagan makes campaign stop at MU, (October 29).

1989 Up, up and away. MUs hot air balloon debuts.

1989 Millersville was listed as one of the top 115 public universities in America in a book titled, How to Get an Ivy League Education at a State University.

1981 Tragedy strikes the campus when two sisters die in a fire at Brookwood Apartments.

1983 Millersville State College officially becomes Millersville University of Pennsylvania on July 1.

1994 A springtime ritual ended: The very popular—but unsanctioned—annual coed naked relays. According to Dennis Downey's book We Sing to Thee, "Campus police attempted to put a halt to the competition by locking Biemesderfer Stadium's gates, and a near riot ensued."

1983 The "mystery" professor scandal causes media blitz with all the major TV networks reporting from campus. Paul Crafton taught simultaneously at MU, Shippensburg and George Washington University. He was charged with using false identities.

1988 Lancaster Partnership Program announced, December 1988.

1991 Computer terminals replace the card catalog in Ganser Library.

1990

1980 Mount St. Helens, a volcano in Washington, erupts and sends a column of ash and gas more than 15 miles into the atmosphere.

1980 Former Beatle John Lennon dies after being shot by a fan outside his New York City apartment.

1983 Apple introduces a personal computer with a mouse.

1984 Researchers isolate and identify the AIDS virus.

1986 The space shuttle Challenger explodes 76 seconds after launch, killing the crew of seven including Christa McAuliffe, who was to be the first civilian in space.

1990 The Berlin Wall, a symbol of the Cold War separating citizens and families of East and West Berlin, was dismantled after almost 30 years.

1989 A magnitude 7.1 earthquake hits Northern California, killing 67 people, collapsing part of the Bay Bridge and disrupting the scheduled World Series game in San Francisco.

1992 Democratic candidate Bill Clinton defeats incumbent George Bush for the presidency.

1991 Persian Gulf War: allied forces attack Iraq, inflicting heavy casualties and force withdrawal from Kuwait. Operation Desert Storm employed 532,000 U.S. troops.

1980 - 2005

During this 25-year period, the world changed in light years. The explosion of technology—personal computers, cell phones, the Internet—changed the way people communicated, worked, socialized and even learned.

The campus is growing and constantly improving. Millersville students still carry backpacks. But tucked amongst the books are cell phones and laptop computers.

For all the technological progress, violence has touched all Americans. The shootings at Columbine High School forever changed the assumption of our children's safety in school. Decades of American peace were shattered by the first Gulf War. On September 11, 2001, a new chapter in terrorism was etched into the American psyche. We are at war in Iraq.

Throughout all this, MU has been in the forefront of the changing times. In 2003, it established the Center for Disaster Research and Education and, last year, hosted a symposium on homeland security which attracted nationally known experts.

1994 On the heels of the blockbuster movie Jurassic Park, paleontologist Dr. Robert Bakker presented the annual Brossman Science Lecture to an overflowing audience of youngsters and adults who shared a fascination of dinosaurs.

1996 Official University home page goes live on the World Wide Web.

2001 MU's Department of Art replicates the world's most famous triceratops. Created in bronze, it is on permanent display at the main entrance to the Smithsonian's National Museum of Natural History in Washington, D.C.

1995 Students hold a memorial service to mourn the death of one of MU's beloved swans. The individual responsible was expelled and charged with numerous offenses.

1998 MU first ever capital campaign ends raising $27.5 million, exceeding its goal by $3.5 million.

2003 Dr. Francine G. McNairy is appointed president of Millersville University—its first woman and first African American.

2004-05 Millersville University celebrates its 150th anniversary.

2005

1995 A bomb rips through a federal office building in Oklahoma City, killing 169 people and injuring 600 others.

1999 In Littleton, Colo., two students at Columbine High School open fire on their classmates and teachers, systematically killing 13 people and wounding 16 others before killing themselves.

2000 The "I love you" virus disrupts computer networks worldwide.

2003 U.S. forces attack Iraq.

2001 On September 11, terrorists attack America. Hijackers crash jetliners into the World Trade Center and the Pentagon. A fourth plane, Flight 93, crashes 80 miles outside of Pittsburgh.

2004 Summer Olympics take place in Athens, Greece.

2005 Episode III: Revenge of the Sith—the final Star Wars movie was a hit almost 30 years after the original movie in 1977.

1995 Former football star O.J. Simpson is acquitted of the 1994 murders of his ex-wife and Ron Goldman in Los Angeles.

1999 The Kennedy "curse" strikes again when the small plane piloted by John F. Kennedy Jr. crashes in the waters off Martha's Vineyard. Also killed were Kennedy's wife, Carolyn, and his sister-in-law, Lauren Bessette.

CLASS NOTES

Classes of the 1950s "Mini-Reunion"

Classes of the 1950s will hold a Millersville "mini-reunion" on September 18 in the West Chester area. Previous events have been held in West Chester, Ephrata and York. This year marks the fifth "mini-reunion" for the classes.

Millersville grads from the 1950s, and their spouses, are welcome. There is a nominal charge of $10 per person for food, drink and socializing with friends and fellow grads.

Millersville's winning basketball tradition during the 1950s will be celebrated and all Marauder players from that era are encouraged to attend.

For more information or to be placed on the email list, contact Bill Romans '57 at billyroma@verizon.net, or phone is 610-436-0842.

TIMELINE REVISTED

Betty (Morrow) Sherman '66

William Sherman, Betty's husband, writes:

"Imagine my surprise when I was reading the article 150 years.... A Timeline of Our History in the latest edition of the Millersville Review and I saw a picture of my wife of 37 years, Betty (Morrow) Sherman '66.

She is the young coed in the 1963 picture struggling with a manual typewriter. Unfortunately, after four years at Millersville, she did not develop a high level of proficiency with a keyboard, but she did go on to complete 35 highly successful years as a math teacher of gifted and talented students. Betty retired last June and throughout her working life she combined her love of teaching with raising two children, and being a wonderful wife. What more could I ask for? Now she is enjoying retirement, doing some traveling, and finding her life as busy as when she was working.

The Shermans reside in East Windsor, N.J.

Michael Basilovich '90, NASA scientist receives Presidential Award

At the South Lawn of the White House, Michael Basilovich '90 (first row, far left) joined President George W. Bush (first row, center) and other recipients of the 2004 Presidential Early Career Awards for Scientists and Engineers (PECASE) on June 13, 2005. The PECASE represents the highest honor that a young scientist or engineer can receive in the United States.

Basilovich, a meteorologist with NASA's Global Modeling and Assimilation Office at Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md., was one of two NASA scientists that received the award. Among his published research is a recent article, "2005: Global Changes of the Water Cycle Intensity," Journal of Climate: Vol. 18, No. 10, co-authored with Siegfried D. Schubert and Gregory K. Walker. The study evaluates numerical simulations of the 20th century climate, focusing on the changes of the global water cycle. White House photo by Paul Morse, used with permission.

Student Spotlight

Christina Carpenter

Christina Carpenter '05 is fast—and focused.

Carpenter completed an outstanding PSAC championship meet when she earned her third straight 100-meter crown and also successfully defended her conference 200-meter title. She met NCAA Division II provisional qualifying standards in both events and qualified in the 100 for the 2005 national meet in Abilene, Texas.

Over the course of her junior and senior seasons, Carpenter won the 100 meters 13 times and was victorious in a dozen 200-meter finals. She captured Outstanding Track Athlete honors twice at the PSAC meet (2004-05) and was named the top overall female performer in 2004. She also holds the school indoor record in the 200 (25.94 seconds).

Carpenter also excelled in the classroom. She received her bachelor's degree in elementary education and has been a dean's list and PSAC Scholar-Athlete honoree who attained a 3.55 cumulative grade point average. In addition, Carpenter received the prestigious Elwood J. Finley Award as MU's outstanding senior woman athlete.

What have been the keys to her success? Hard work and fierce determination.

Carpenter's focus in the starting block is intense—she only hears the gun. "I'm more of a scooter, I don't lift my knees as high as other sprinters," she said. "But when I race, I take a deep breath, clear my mind, and wait to hear the gun. I worry about my lane and not the other competitors around me."

Carpenter did not begin her track career until her junior year at Hempfield High School. "I played basketball originally, and one of the parents noticed I was fast on the court and that I should go out for track."

Carpenter successfully balanced the rigors of student life both as a student and athlete by "time management" skills.

Next on the block is her teaching career, preferably close to home.

"The sooner I get into the classroom, the happier I'll be."

Black & Gold scrimmage

An enthusiastic crowd turned out at Penn Manor High School's athletic field April 22 to watch the Millersville football team's annual Black & Gold scrimmage. The inclement weather did not dampen the spirits of the players, coaches or spectators, as the Marauders went through their paces with a full scrimmage highlighted by several long-yardage plays and bone-jarring hits. The Black squad emerged "victorious" by a 14-12 score.

Former 'Ville head coach Dr. Gene A. Carpenter and current skipper Joe Trainer addressed the team after the scrimmage.

Honorary scrimmage captains were Tom Burns '91 (Black team) and Gerry Nau '74 (Gold team).

Spring sports wrap

Women's Tennis—For the seventh time in team history, Millersville earned NCAA Division II East Region championship honors. The Marauders avenged a regular season defeat to PSAC rival Bloomsburg by beating the Huskies, 5-4, in the regional final May 7 to earn a berth in the NCAA Round of 16 in central Florida. The 'Ville's season ended at the hands of top-ranked BYU-Hawaii, but not before the Marauders tallied another fine campaign at 12-4. The senior doubles duo of Steph Eckhart and Kate Opilo excelled with a 19-6 record, followed by the sophomore pairing of Morgan Burdette and Christy Lilli (13-6). Five players recorded 10 or more victories in singles play for MU this season, led by Lilli (15-6), Burdette (14-3), and Opilo (13-5).

Baseball—The Marauders struggled at times during the 2005 season, finishing with 11 victories. Several underclassmen performed well and the experienced they gained will strengthen next year's club. They include freshman infielder Brett Rhoads (.366), sophomore designated hitter Jamie Haas (.307, 4 home runs), and freshman pitcher Austin Hinkle (3-5 record, 2.54 earned run average).

Lacrosse—MU started the 2005 campaign strong with a 3-1 record, but struggled in PSAC play and missed the conference tourney when East Stroudsburg edged the Marauders in a tiebreaker. Versatile junior Liz Richmond led the team in scoring with 35 points, including a club-high 13 assists, and senior center Nicole Berardi recorded a team-best 25 goals. Berardi and defensive wing Kristen Maze earned PSAC all-star first team honors this spring, and defender Mia Gambino was chosen to the second unit.

Softball—The Marauders finished in sixth place in the rugged PSAC Eastern Division—a division that included a pair of 40-win teams in Shippensburg and Bloomsburg. All-star junior catcher Brandi Catherman led the Black & Gold in batting for the second straight season, averaging .342. Freshman outfielder Alexa Ashwell (.279) joined Catherman on the PSAC All-East 2nd Team.

Men's Tennis—MU finished with a 7-7 record and placed third in the 2005 PSAC tourney. Freshman Cliff Boyd and junior Brandon Kessler tied for the team lead in singles wins with eight apiece, and the #1 doubles tandem of Boyd and sophomore Greg Bennett recorded an 8-7 mark.

Golf—The Marauders qualified two individual competitors for the NCAA-II East Region Championships in early May—senior captain Scott Micklewright and freshman Corey Gast, who finished 8th and 32nd, respectively. Micklewright was the Marauders' top performer in 10 events in the 2004-05 campaign and tallied a 74.9-stroke average, followed by Gast with a 77.9-stroke mark.
