DR. RICHARD WARREN, JR.

Dr. Richard Warren Jr is an award-winning educator, renowned speaker, and dynamic professor. He was named the 2019 Maryland State Teacher of the Year and one of Samsung's "Solve for Tomorrow" State Finalists. He spent nearly a decade teaching STEM and is passionate about creating equitable, just, and growth-oriented spaces for students, educators, and their communities.

Richard earned his doctorate in Educational Leadership from the University of Maryland Eastern Shore (UMES) where his research in teacher recruitment and retention has garnered the attention of hundreds of educational agencies who are implementing mentoring, induction, and pathway programs for teachers. Richard works closely with educational agencies to advise, recruit, and help teachers find success and gratification in the education profession.

Richard leads the Department of Education at UMES as the Hazel Professor of Education, a role where he actively recruits and prepares students to become the next generation of teachers. At UMES, he is the founder and director of the UMES Men of Color in Education program, an innovative program designed to educate K-12 men of color to become teachers and provide support for them along their high school, college and career continuum. His work with students, teachers, and educational agencies has become well known and continues to evolve.
