

Lancaster City staff and community members plan ways to integrate art into City green infrastructure during a campus workshop.

INTEGRATING ART INTO GREEN INFRASTRUCTURE

Artist Stacy Levy and the City of Lancaster are working to transform Water Street into a complete street that enables safe access for pedestrians, cyclists, motorists and transit riders. Levy is working to create a long-term strategic plan that will integrate art and green infrastructure into stormwater management. Millersville and the City of Lancaster organized a Ware Center lecture and Lombardo Welcome Center workshop by Stacy Levy. The hands-on workshop brought together faculty, staff students and community members to plan art installations and green infrastructure improvements to Water Street.
